

With the advent of technology and globalisation of world economies, the availability as well as demand of household products such as microwaves, televisions, or rice cookers has skyrocketed and people can buy a wider range of such goods from their locality. The competition among production companies has risen over time and they have expanded their arsenal of household goods to attract more customers and give them a variety of choices.

Although this has proved to be much beneficial for the economy as a whole and ^{large} companies in particular, it has also increased the dependence of a common man on technology and other goods that aid them in their daily activities. ~~These~~ ^{The} wider availability and production of such goods does save time and help in daily activities, of course ~~you~~ ^{one} wouldn't gather wood to ignite fire and cook over it.

But the point is that if we somehow lose access to ~~these~~ ^{these} good even for a short while, we become helpless and ~~we~~ have no clue of what is to be done and how.

It is not harmful to make use of televisions, microwaves or rice cookers for assistance or brief entertainment. But, one should ~~not~~ not allow their lives to be ~~governed~~ ~~by~~ ~~their~~ dependent on or governed by them. We should learn to be self-sufficient and independent. We should know exactly the procedure to be followed or the steps to be taken for performing any activity at hand in case of unavailability or failure of these equipments. It is always beneficial to be prepared beforehand.

The wider range of household goods being available now means that markets have expanded and producers and consumers around the world ~~are~~ ~~better~~ have been brought closer together.

This also means that selling of ~~good~~ duplicate or unauthentic goods ~~under~~ ~~the name of sales~~ is also ~~for more~~ at cheaper prices and luring oblivious customers has ~~also~~ become pretty recurrent. This also calls for consumer awareness measures to be taken.

In conclusion, the world becoming a global village and availability of a wider range of household goods than ever before is a positive development, but only if dependency over these goods is reduced and ~~of~~ initiatives for self dependence and skill enhancement are taken.
